BERRY-BLACK.

Miss Josie Berry And Mr. John Black United In Marriage Sunday Afternoon In Louisville.

Miss Nancy Josephine Berry and Mr. John Black were married Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. The wedding took place at the home of his cousin, Mr. and Mrs. Winters, in Louisville. An impressive ceremony was said by the Rev. H. H. Fanner, pastor of the Louisville English Lutheran church. A beautiful reception was given the bride and groom by Mr. and Mrs. Winters after which they left for their home at Silvercreek.

The bride was married in a house-dress of light blue voile which was strikingly becoming to her. Her traveling suit was a stylish tailored dress. Mrs. Black is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. R. Berry, of this city, and is an exceedingly attractive young woman. She has many admirers who will be surprised to hear of her marriage, although her engagement to Mr. Black had been one of long standing. Mrs. Black had held a position in the News office at different times and the whole staff extends to her and Mr. Black heartfelt wishes for a happy future.

Mr. Black is a former Breckenridge man and has been most successful in his business undertakings. Miss Lucille Berry, the bride's youngest sister, attended the wedding, which was a surprise to the rest of her family. Miss Lucille and her sister went to Louisville Saturday to buy the bridal trousseau.

LUCILE MEMORIAL

Dedicated Sunday With Beautiful Services--Dr. Warren Delivers Elegant Address.

The Lucile Memorial was dedicated Sunday morning and all the plans made for the occasion were carried out in a decorous manner. Dr. Warren, of Louisville, officiated in the dedicatory ceremonies assisted by Rev. Mr. Graves, the pastor, and Rev. Mr. Dillon. The musical program was appropriately arranged by Miss Lillian Sipe, the organist, and Mrs. Reid sang a solo accompanied by Miss Smith. A history of the church is given in another column of the News.

HERE AT HOME

Cloverport Citizens Gladly Testify And Confidently Recommend Doan's Kidney Pills.

It is testimony like the following that has placed Doan's Kidney Pills so far above competitors. When people gather here at home raise their voices in praise there is no room left for doubt. Read the public statement of a Cloverport citizen:

Price Graham, Railroad St., Cloverport, Ky., says: "I can recommend Doan's Kidney Pills as a remedy that lives up to representations. For four years I suffered from disordered kidneys and the secretions from these organs were too frequent in passage, obliging me to rise several times during the night. Whenever I caught cold, it was sure to settle in my kidneys and greatly aggravate my trouble. My back ached severely and when I stood, I was seized by sharp twinges through my loins. The ache in my back at night greatly disturbed my rest and in the morning I arose feeling lame and sore. I was very nervous, the slightest work tired me and I often felt dull and languid. Doan's Kidney Pills, procured at Fisher's Drug Store, relieved me in a short time and it required but the contents of four boxes to effect a complete cure. I can state that this cure has proven permanent and it therefore gives me pleasure to recommend Doan's Kidney Pills to other persons afflicted in a similar manner."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-McIlroy Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States. Remember the name--Doan's--and make no other.

NEWTON-COLLINS.

Miss Lessie Newton and Mr. Warfield Collins Were Married Yesterday Afternoon--Short Bridal Trip.

A pretty home wedding was that of Miss Lessie Newton and Mr. Warfield Collins which took place yesterday afternoon at the bride's residence on Bishop Hill. The Rev. German P. Dillon officiated and the ceremony was said at 4 o'clock in the presence of relatives and friends. The bridal couple left on the East bound afternoon train for a short wedding trip. The bride's dress was a pretty material in the new shades of green and tan, and she wore an elegant hat to match.

Mrs. Collins is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Horace Newton, one of the oldest and best known families of Cloverport. She is a pleasant and accomplished young woman. Mr. Collins is the son of Mrs. Mattie Collins, and is an energetic and splendid man. They will make their home with his mother on Second street.

Gen. David R. Murray and Mrs. Murray and daughter, Mildred, left here Sunday afternoon for their new home in Indianapolis. They will keep house at 8533 Shelby street.

JOHNSON SPRINGS.

New Wrinkles On Republicans Kentuckian Shows His Class As Legislator Of Force And Skill.

Washington, March 16.--The House of Representatives is realizing the fact that in Representative Ben Johnson, of Kentucky, the House has acquired a legislator of force and skill. Mr. Johnson displayed all of the qualities of a shrewd and resourceful general in his fight recently on several of the bills brought into the House by the District of Columbia Committee.

Mr. Johnson was "on the job" all day and as an objector who showed that he knows how to fight, he made a great hit. He received numerous congratulations on his success and the Washington morning papers pay him high compliments. The Washington Post says:

"Representative Johnson, of Kentucky, played the part of chief objector during the entire six hours of the session. He started the trouble that resulted in two roll calls and created a parliamentary tangle that brought a worried look to even the placid countenance of Asher Hinds, the adviser in chief of the presiding officer, on all disturbing questions of procedure."

The Post, in further describing the pandemonium precipitated in the Republican camp by Mr. Johnson says: "There was a scurrying from corridor and cloak room to the succor of Chairman Smith, of the committee, but Democrats, evidently determined, to back Mr. Johnson at the call for a vote, showed both a superior strength of numbers and a greater vigor of voice. Query and counter query crossed the chamber and Parliamentary Hinds was what was the work into a quart of an hour."--Louis Ludlow in Louisville Post.

SAD DEATH

Of Bright Young Man at the Age of 26 Years--Was a Most Popular Boy.

Locust Hill, March 21.--[Special.]--On the 16th day of March, 1910, in the twenty-sixth year of his age, James Carman answered the call of his maker. He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Thos. R. Carman, of near Bunas. He had been in bad health for some time, and his death had been expected by his parents and friends. He was an exceedingly bright and promising young man, and will be greatly missed in his home and social circles. He found peace with Jesus about ten days before his death, and died shouting his praises.

The pall bearers were: Lester and Joe Pile, Rice and John Laible, Virgil Hudson and Jesse Sipes. The interment took place in the Cook graveyard.

A New Kind.

Mr. Joe Sawyer has been ill of grip and some one asked his little daughter, Jane, what was the matter with him. She answered: "He has the suit case."

KEEN RACE FOR THE SOUTH POLE

Each Expedition to Start Next Summer Practically at the Same Time and From Opposite Sides of the Pole

BY JAMES A. EDERSON.

THE south pole may as well come and be discovered. The Americans and English are after it, and when both branches of the Anglo-Saxon race start out to do a thing there is nothing more to it. As Captain Robert F. Scott, the leader of the prospective British expedition, expressed it, he will stay two years if he does not discover the pole in one, will stay three years if he does not discover it in two, and added, "in fact, we shall jolly well stop there till the thing is done."

As for the American expedition, its commanding officer will be Robert E. Peary, even though he is not to accompany it in person. It is Peary who plans it. Peary who turned over to it the $100,000 given him in New York, Peary who donates it, the use of the Roosevelt and Peary's companions in the discovery of the north pole who will man the expedition. Since Peary tried for the other end of the world for twenty-three years, it is unnecessary to say that the exploring party organized by him and animated by his spirit will also "jolly well stop there till the thing is done."

There have been few finer examples than that furnished by Commander Peary in this entire affair. His correspondence with Captain Scott to de-plations of rear admirals, but only one pole discoverer. Who knows the names of six of our estimable rear admirals? Yet who in the circle of the nation has not heard of Peary? Some of these holders of toy titles and gilt shoulder straps get an inflated notion of such things. In the big world of real men and women what do they count for? What have they to do with the ages? So long as history lists Peary's name will last. What could a rear admiral's title add to him?

Bartlett Will Go.

Captain Robert A. Bartlett, who commanded the Roosevelt in its trip to the arctic and went nearer the north pole than any white man except Peary, has already resigned a good job to take his old station in the trip to the other end of the world. Before he had sent in his resignation his possible connection with the antarctic expedition was discussed with Commander Peary. "Will Bartlett go?" somebody asked. Peary paused in open-mouthed astonishment. "Will Bartlett go?" he repeated manfully, as if to make sure that he had heard aright. "Bartlett will go. Nothing but a postpaid claim and the bars of a state or federal prison could possibly keep Bartlett from going."

Some of the pictures of Captain terminer if an American expedition would be available to the British, who through the Shackleton and other explorations had established a prior claim in the antarctic field, revealed the instincts of the sportsman and an honorable regard for the feelings of others. Peary's donation of his $100,000 gift and of the Roosevelt had a dramatic touch and exhibited unselfishness. This same unselfishness was displayed by his voluntary relinquishment of the honor of leading the expedition.

Belated Recognition.

Those of us who criticized Mr. Peary for his attacks on Dr. Cook should now be more ready to render tribute to the true discoverer of the north pole. While personally not for long deceived by the Cook claims, I, like the majority of other newspaper men who wrote on the subject, regarded Peary's statements on his rival as augurers and in bad taste. Subsequent events have to some extent justified him, or at least have shown his procreation. When one has worked twenty-three years for a certain thing and at last has attained it only to have some purveyor of fiction best him to the cubic office and claim the laurels—well, who wouldn't yell "Stop, thief!"

The last heard of Dr. Cook he was in South America, but he was not looking for the south pole. He had doubts as to whether that to the cable lines, to last him the rest of his natural life. The doctor seems to be yearning for obscurity. Why not let him have it? It is now Peary's turn. The majority of representatives may not be willing to make him a rear admiral, but why should that disturb him? There are abstrus and proofs that would convince also the University of Copenhagen. It will be impossible, however, for the discoverer of the south pole to "bring on his Eskimos" for the reason that no human beings live on the antarctic continent.

Pole on a High Plateau.

The probability is that the south pole is on a plateau 10,000 feet in elevation and that both exploring parties will have an all land route. Shackleton found land all the way in his journey and when he reached his farthest south at 111 miles from the goal said that powerful sledges revealed a continuing plateau as far as he could see. His elevation was then about 10,000 feet. Because of the altitude and for the reason that there is no sea water to modify the temperature the area surrounding the south pole is colder than that encountered by arctic explorers. Mountains and glaciers also make the going in the antarctic difficult. For all that, the discovery of the south pole should be less difficult than was that of the northern end of the world. There are no open leads and no drifting ice floes, two of the obstacles that have defeated so many arctic explorers in their efforts to reach the north pole.

The route to be followed by the American party leading in from Weddell sea is also thought to be over the land, though next to nothing is actually known concerning it. A coast line has been discovered, and this is supposed to be the shore of the antarctic continent. It may, however, be only a shelf, with open sea beyond it. Again, it may lead to high and practically inaccessible mountain ranges. This uncertainty as to what the Americans may encounter would put the odds in favor of the British, since they will follow for most of the distance the course already traversed by Lieutenant Shackleton, just as Shackleton, in turn, kept close to the track made by Captain Scott in his first expedition of 1901-4.

Two Polar Dashes in 1911.

The Englishmen will go in from New Zealand and the Americans from Punta Arenas, on the southern extremity of South America. The start in each case will be made next summer. The seasons in the southern hemisphere are, of course, the exact reverse of those in the north. In midsummer there and the 4th of July in midwinter. It is designed to go into winter quarters in 1911 and to make the actual polar dash during the spring and summer of 1912-13. If successful the expeditions will then start home early in 1912. It is barely possible that news may be heard of one or both ventures before either reaches a cable station, as the British intend to take wireless apparatus and to establish wireless stations at their two bases, which will be approximately 500 miles apart. It is not impossible that these wireless stations could be utilized for communication with the outside world, although the distance will be very great.

Kidney Trouble Makes You Miserable.

Almost everyone knows of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy, because of its remarkable health restoring properties. Swamp-Root fulfills almost every wish in our coming rheumatism, pain in the back, kidney, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passage. It corrects inability to hold water and scaling pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine, beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often through the day, and to get up many times during the night.

Swamp-Root is not recommended for everything but if you have kidney, liver or bladder trouble, it will be found just the remedy you need. It has been thoroughly tested in private practice, and has proved so successful that a special arrangement has been made by which all readers of this paper, who have not already tried it, may have a sample bottle sent free by mail, also a book telling how to get Swamp-Root, and how to read this generous offer in this paper and to correspond to Dr. Kilmer & Co.,

Binghamton, N. Y. The regular fifty-cent bottles of Swamp-Root are sold by all druggists. Don't make any mistake but remember the name, Swamp-Root. Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the name, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

F. H. Pierce Makes Fast Auto Trip From Denver to Las Vegas

F. H. Pierce, general manager of the Avas Pura company, who returned from a trip to Denver Saturday in a brand new automobile, broke all auto records to date between the two cities, both as regards speed and endurance.

Mr. Pierce, together with J. C. Allen, a professional chauffeur, of Denver and Chas. H. Rogers Jr. of this city, left Denver in Mr. Pierce's new Chalmers Detroit 30, Thursday last at noon. They reached Colorado Springs at 3:25 leaving there at 4 o'clock for Pueblo, where they arrived at 8:20 p. m. Friday evening where they spent the second night out. Saturday morning they started on their final lap of their journey, making the final 120 miles to Las Vegas in fast time, reaching here at 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon.

According to Mr. Pierce, they averaged 17 miles an hour on the trip, used but twenty gallons of gasoline and never had a mishap of any kind on the whole trip, which is a record in itself.

From Trinidad to this city, Charley Rogers drove the car by himself. After having returned to Denver upon arrival at the former city, Las Vegas Optic.

leader of the British expedition, was born in 1882 and has been in the navy since 1901. He served in various ships, becoming successively lieutenant, commander and captain, which last rank he has held since 1904. His first antarctic expedition started in from Port Lyttelton, New Zealand, which will be the base of the new venture. Near the eightieth parallel a high ice barrier was found, but a long shift was made, a pass discovered, and an approach was pushed toward the pole, which stopped a few hundred miles short of the record made by Lieutenant Shackleton last year. It is not without interest that Shackleton gained his first antarctic experience as a member of this first 8000 expedition. It is hardly probable that he will accompany the next one, as he is now busy writing a book, but either next summer or later may lead an expedition of his own. He will shortly visit America, where he is to be signally honored.

Why Shackleton Turned Back.

Lieutenant Shackleton's account of the last day of his journey is thrilling, and as it describes conditions which will be met by the two expeditions now forming I subjoin a few extracts:

"The blizzard had done its work, however, and we recognized that we had just about reached the limit of our endurance. We got on at 2 a. m. and at 4 a. m. were away for a short time. We had with us a small boat, food, instruments and the queen's flag, with a bamboo rod for a staff."

"Half running and half wading, we made that last march, and at 9 a. m. in latitude 82 degrees 20 minutes we hoisted the queen's flag blowing out the key which had cut us to the bone, took possession of the plateau on behalf of his majesty and immediately began the march back to our camp, our faces once more turned toward our dearest home."

"The pole, though only ninety-seven geographical miles away (all statute miles), was impossible for us to attain. Before we stretched the same white plain over which we had traveled for many days. Our powerful Geertz glasses showed no sign of land, and we could safely assume that the geographical south pole was situated at this immense plateau, between 10,000 and 11,000 feet above sea level and certainly the coldest and one of the most stormy parts of the world. We took a photograph of the party, with the queen's flag blowing out the key which had cut us to the bone, took possession of the plateau on behalf of his majesty and immediately began the march back to our camp, our faces once more turned toward our dearest home."

"The leader of the American expedition will probably not be announced for some time. The most likely men for the post are Borup and McMillan, both of whom accompanied Peary in his north pole dash. Whoever it is, Edmund, Robert E. Peary will be the actual leader. Under his guidance and inspiration we have a right to hope that, despite the handicaps against the Americans, they will win the race and that the first of the world's south pole, as at the north, will be the stars and stripes."

Successful Tobacco Buyer

Ekron, Ky. March 14—Special.—Leon Gibson, the tobacco buyer here, closed his season's work at Ekron Saturday, March 12. Mr. Gibson has handled 250,000 pounds of tobacco. He intends coming back to Ekron in time to purchase next season's crop.

Mr. Gibson desires to thank all the farmers with whom he has done business as their relations have been very pleasant. Not a single man having gone back on a contract which is more than can be said of any other community where he has purchased tobacco. He also thanks the business men for their kindness, especially the railroad agent here who has been very accommodating to him.

CLOSING DAYS ARE STRENUOUS

Pruning Hook Applied to a Number of Appropriation Bills and Others Slaughtered—Governor Willson Issues Interesting Labor Day Proclamation—Hundred Bills in the Chief Executive's Hands.

BY JOHN H. STUART.

Frankfort, Ky., (Special.)—After being twice defeated in the senate, the bill providing for an issue of bonds by the state to the extent of $500,000 passed that body by a vote of 27 to 7. Whether the bill will pass the house of commons is another question. The impression exists that at the last minute the measure will be adopted by the house in order to keep down any chance of the extra session which was threatened by Governor Wilson. The interest-bearing warrant bill has already become a law, and this, with the responsibility of the state treasury funds will put the state treasury in good shape by this fall if the bonds are authorized.

The closing days of a legislative session are always the most strenuous, especially to the few men on the rules committee who must advise the clerks. The rules committee have complete control of all legislation during the last 10 or 15 days, and no bill can be introduced without their sanction. As a consequence the members of these committees are beset and bothered from morning till night with requests for favors, such as to "pull up their pet bills. It is mighty nice from one standpoint to be on the committee, but it is a great deal of power to cull up your own bill, but it is a most onerous task to listen to the pleadings of the others for favors. The senate committee treated every senator justly last week and allowed them to have their say. It is a pity it voted on. As a consequence all the senators are in a much better humor than they were several weeks ago, and they are all ready to go on almost over the county unit question.

The governor vetoed a bill last week and the legislature passed it over his veto. It was the bill of Representative Klair providing for the recording of names of all those who pool their crops. It was the bill that both the seller and buyer of a pooled crop, unless sold by authority of the pool officers, shall be fined. The governor in his veto said he had no objection to the bill, but that he thought that they had pooled their crops, but he thought it unfair to punish an innocent purchaser of a pooled crop, even if the purchaser may have been deceived by the seller. He thought the pooled one by going to the county clerk's office. The vote to pass the bill over the veto was not a party one by any means, as a number of the members of the majority voted to override the governor.

The way appropriation bills have been slaughtered this session makes the old-timers almost weep. The condition of the treasury was such that the governor openly announced in his message to the legislature that he would veto all appropriations unless some money was provided with which to pay them. With this staring them in the face, all amounts asked for have been cut. The $147,000 asked for by the school of reform was cut almost half in two. The amounts asked for by the State university and the normal schools were scaled down near the lowest point possible and the bill was then held out altogether. The senate appropriated $150,000 for buildings generally and $45,000 a year to maintain the same. The house refused to appropriate more than $25,000, and then the bill was defeated. The State fair asked for $200,000 for more buildings and improvements, and the house had hardly time to pass a bill for the State fair work to pass, before the legislature adjourned. The senate may not pass the $38,000, and the senate may not pass that much.

There was one bill, however, that came out of the house, and passed the senate. This was the bill asking for an appropriation of $10,000 a year to help maintain the home for incurables established by the King's Daughters from all parts of the State. Kentucky already makes provision for caring for its insane and its feeble-minded, but has never made any provision for the incurables. The cruel, heartless and penniless people who have incurable diseases or are incurably crippled. The King's Daughters started this home, and have been doing it ever since. It was impossible for the legislature to limit means they could raise to care for the scores of worthy incurables, so they appealed to the state for aid. The legislature has been their care through Mrs. Homen. Their story of Louisville that the bill appropriating the $10,000 a year was passed by the house, and the senate by practically unanimous vote.

Governor Willson is much interested in preserving Kentucky's forests and in having more trees planted for future generations, so the following proclamation issued by him for Arbor day will be read with much interest: "To the People of Kentucky:

the lives of several people for a tree to grow great. It takes only a little while to kill it. We have wasted hundreds of millions of trees that it took more than one hundred years to grow. We have planted a tree every year now and putting nothing in their place. We ought to plant more trees than we use every year. We have millions of acres of lands that will not grow anything else but trees and we could cover them all with trees. We have roads and highways, roads and in the streets and in the yards and on the farms everywhere that will not be used for buildings or crops or anything else, where trees could be planted that would make those who come after us rich, and thankful for the face of the earth.

"Let us all get together and all plant trees and all ask everybody else to plant trees and let us have a special meeting on the 8th day of April, 1910, in every schoolhouse and other good places for meetings to talk over how to have more trees, how to make every place more beautiful, how to plant the waste places with trees that will bring health by and by, how to save something for the people fifty years from now who won't have any wood if we do not do something about it, how to put some of our prayers for blessings to come to people hereafter in living shape by starting trees that will answer our own prayers.

"Let us plant trees for ourselves and for all whom we love. Let us plant trees for the future and for this year and next year and every year. Let us plant trees for profit, for gladness, for beauty, for conservation, for storage of the rainwater, for houses and furniture, for everything we use food for, for our own sake, for our children's sake for our grandchildren's sake and for humanity's sake.

" AUGUSTUS E. WILLSON,
"Governor of Kentucky."

The members of the Retail Grocers' association are jubilant over the passage in the house of their bill to amend the exemption laws of the state. The bill provides that, where any person earns $50 a month or less, 10 per cent of the amount shall be subject to attachment, and all over $50 a month shall also be subject to garnishment. The retail grocers claim that the present exemption laws work greatly to their injury and that, unless a debtor chooses to pay them, they have no recourse. They say they they want the law fixed so that, if a person is earning $50 a month, he shall at least be required to pay as much as $5 a month on his bill. The bill passed the house by a large majority.

For the first forty days of the session, the county clerk's office was not even called. It looked very much like the fight for and against the county unit bill would block all other legislation. The county unit bill was not passed, but the fifty bills would be passed, but at the county unit measure was put to sleep. Finally the wheels began to turn. The county unit bill was passed at the most amazing rate. The senate passed 26 bills in one day, and nearly that many on a number of other days. The house passed 25 bills in one day, because it takes so much longer to call the roll in that body, but that body acted no time and held afternoon sessions. The senate passed the bill, and the legislature adjourned on the night of March 15 they left over the night of March 16. The session and he has 10 days in which to approve or disapprove them. The closing days are very strenuous for the county clerk's office. The clerk has the night and day in order to keep the Journal up. The enrolling clerks find it impossible to enroll all the bills and the clerk has to close the morning assistants to help out.

Frank M. Andrews, the architect who designed the splendid new capitol that is now being admired by all who visit it, was here last week and addressed the legislature on the subject of making sufficient appropriations to complete the building and beautify the grounds according to the original plans. He said the building should be considered as a monument to the state and that the architects and every Kentuckian should feel proud that his state has the most beautiful capitol building in the United States, or rather will have the most beautiful one when it is completed. He said the first capitol com-shown that they have understood the money that was wanted, viz., a building that would be a credit to the city, and not a mere mercenary, or in other words, if it were a mere building with four walls and a roof to protect from the weather, it would be a waste of money. He said that he was not an architect, he told the gentlemen that to cut down the amounts appropriated for the building, and to use cheap and inferior material, was just like throwing money to the river. He said that he recommended $50,000 to pay for the building, and that he would not approach to the front of the building. The pending bill, which had passed the council, was for $100,000, and he approached the money. He said it would be throwing the money away to build a $100,000 apartment, and that he would have had the use of such cheap materials that the frosts and snows of a few winters would ruin it. He said that he would be willing to have $300,000 be appropriated to beautify the building, inside and out, and he said that the money need not be spent for the building, but for the city. He said that the deficit in the treasury would disappear before hardly any of the money would

CLOVERPORT, KY., WEDNESDAY, MAR. 23, 1910

May your Easter joys be as sweet as the lilies, and may the Spring sunshine turn every sorrow into a rose of gladness for you and your friends.

When the Democrats and insurgent Republicans went together last week in the American Congress and overthrew Speaker Cannon, by taking away his power over the members of Congress and the people of this country, they accomplished one of the most notable acts in American history. This act does not affect Mr. Cannon alone, but it cripples the whole Republican machine at Washington. President Taft was behind Mr. Cannon, and directing such legislation as suited the great Republican machine. The Democratic members of Congress and many fair-minded Republicans had stood by and watched this spirit of domination long enough, and they determined to put an end to it, which they did. That which the Speaker wielded was the law of the land; that which he opposed could not be considered. Is it any wonder that there was an insurrection among the members and to put an end to such autocratic power?

In every flame there is a spark of good for some one. And this was the case in the fire last week. Only those who have experienced the destruction of property can realize what it means to lose a home. Still a fire—a big one—we dare say, is sometimes good for us. It stirs up our minds and hearts and makes us think of each other just a little kinder than when the days pass on in the same old routine. Out of the ferment of last week came an aroused friendly sentiment which was beautiful in the extreme. Neighbors opened their homes to the homeless. Checks, gifts and all things that could be given were offered freely and lovingly to those who had lost.

Gen. Simon B. Buckner has recently gone over the battle fields of the Mexican war where he fought with the American army in Mexico in 1848. The General, now getting to be quite an old man, recalled many incidents along the line of march sixty years ago, and pointed out places of interest along the way, and which after so long a period, he had not forgotten.

Referring again to the campaign of 1912, no one at this time can say just who the most valuable man is for the Democratic nomination. Everything points to the conclusion, however, that no matter who the nominee shall be, he will go to the White House.

For Lame Back

An aching back is instantly relieved by an application of Sloan's Liniment.

This liniment takes the place of massage and is better than sticky plasters. It penetrates —without rubbing—through the skin and muscular tissue right to the bone, quickens the blood, relieves congestion, and gives permanent as well as temporary relief.

Here's the Proof.

Mr. JAMES G. LEE, of 1100 9th St., N. E., Washington, D. C., writes: "Thirty years ago I fell from a scaffold and seriously injured my back. I suffered terribly at times from the smart of my back and at other times from numbness and tingling. I had been treated with a club. I used every plaster I could get with no relief. Sloan's Liniment took the pain right out, and I can now do as much labor work as any man in the city thanks to Sloan's Liniment."

Sloan's Liniment

Mr. J. P. Evans, of Mt. Airy, Ga., says: "After being afflicted for three years with rheumatism, I used Sloan's Liniment, and was cured sound and well, and am glad to say I haven't been troubled with rheumatism since. My leg was badly swollen from my hip to my knee, one-half a bottle took the pain and swelling out."

Sloan's Liniment has no equal as a remedy for Rheumatism, Neuralgia, or any pain or stiffness in the muscles or joints.

Prices, 75c, 50c, and $1.00.

Sloan's Liniment, no more, better, stronger, and more powerful than any other liniment.

Dr. Earl S. Sloan, Boston, Mass., U.S.A.

Roy L. Neafus and brother, Broadus, of Guston, visited their sister, Mrs. Joe Bandy, Saturday and Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Z. T. Smith spent Saturday night with John H. Wump and attended religious services at Irvington Sunday.

A surprise wedding took place Sunday afternoon at 5:15 o'clock at the home of Thos. H. Payne. Miss Mary, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Payne, was united in marriage to Mr. Albert Marshall, of Irvington.

Miss Mary is a young lady of real worth and merit, and has quite a sunny disposition which is always beaming out in her face. The groom is the junior member of the Irvington pharmacy and one of the best business men of the town.

Your scribe tenders congratulations to both.

The Cure of the Wrinkles

By HAROLD MAC GRATH

Copyright, 1908, by the Bobbs-Merrill Co.

CHAPTER III.

MR. ANGOT.

THREE nights later, as Hillard and Merrifield were dining together at the club, the steward came into the grill room and swept his hand over the groups of diners. Singling out Hillard, he came solemnly down to the corner table and laid a blue letter at the side of Hillard's place.

"I did not see you when you came in, sir," said the steward, his voice as solemn as his step. "The letter arrived yesterday."

"Thank you, Thomas." With no small difficulty Hillard composed his face and repressed the eagerness in his eyes. She had seen, she had written, the letter lay under his hand! Who said that romance had taken flight? True, the reading of the letter might disillusion him, but always would there be that vision and the voice coming out of the fog. Nonchalantly he turned the letter face downward and went on with the meal.

"I did not know that your mail came to the club," said Merrifield.

"It doesn't. Only rarely a letter drifts this way."

"Well, go on and read it. Don't let me keep you from some charming, I'll wager. Here I pour all my adventures into your ear, and I on my side never so much as get a hint of yours. Go on, read it."

"Adventures, fiddlesticks! The letter can wait. It is probably a bill."

"A bill in a fashionable envelope like this?"

Hillard only smiled, tipped the cradle and refilled Merrifield's glass with some excellent Romanee Conti. "When does Kitty call?" he asked after a while of silence.

"A week from this Saturday, Feb. 2. What the deuce did you bring up that for? I've been trying to forget it."

"Where do they land?"

"Naples. They open in Rome the first week in March. All the arrangements are complete." After coffee Merrifield pushed back his chair. "I'll reserve a table in the billiard room while you read your letter."

"I'll be with you shortly," gratefully.

So with the inevitable black eagle over his teeth Merrifield sauntered off toward the billiard room, while Hillard picked up his letter and studied it. His fingers trembled slightly as he tore open the envelope. The handwriting, the paper, the modesty, all these pointed to a woman of culture and refinement. But a subtle spirit of irony pervaded it all. She would never have answered his printed inquiry had she not laughed over it, for pinned to the top of the letter was the clipping, the stupid, haphazard clipping. "Will the lady who sang from 'Mine Angot' communicate with gentleman who leaned out of the window?" J. H. Burgomaster club. There was neither a formal beginning nor a formal ending, only four crisp lines. But these implied one thing and distinctly the writer had no desire for further communication "with gentleman who leaned out of the window." He read and reread slowly.

I am sorry to learn that my singing disturbed you. There was a reason. At that particular moment I was happy.

That was all. It was enough. She had laughed. She was a lady humorously inclined, not to say mischievous. A comic opera star would have sent her name across road to see what answering could be got out of the incident; a prima donna would have appealed to her pride for the same purpose. A gentleman surely; moreover, she lived within the radius, the official radius, of the Madison square branch of the postoffice, for Hillard was the postmark. Common sense urged him to dismiss the whole affair and laugh over it as "the lady in the fog" had done. But common sense often goes about with a peevish strut and is something to avoid on occasions. Here was a harmless pastime to pursue, common sense notwithstanding. The vein of romance in him was strong, and all the commercial blood of his father could not subjugate it. He rang for paper and messenger and wrote: "Mine Angot. There is a letter for you in the mail department of this office." This was the letter that was so unexpected. (The message was on its way he thought Merrifield, whom he found knocking the balls about in a spiritless manner.)

"A hundred to seventy-five, Dan."

"For what?"

"For the mere fun of the game, of course."

"Make it eleven, just to add interest."

"Cheers, then."

But they both played a very indifferent game. At 10:30 Merrifield's eyes began to hunt the clock, and Hillard grew merciful for various reasons.

"What time does the performance end?" he asked.

"At 10:50, but it takes about twenty minutes to scrape off the makeup."

Merrifield put his cue in the rack. He made off for the coat room. Hillard laughed and went up to the writing room to fulfill a part of his destiny. He took the letter out and read it again. He reread the letter in its blue covering, and then for the first time his eye met the superscription. Like a man ruminated he sat there staring, his head slowly and brought the letter to him, and in his first excitement this had made no impression upon his mind. He had seen nothing peculiarly strange, and here it was, not his initials, but his name in full.

She knew who he was!

In a fashionable quarter of the city there stood a brownstone house, with grotesque turrets, winding steps, and glaring polished red tiles. There was a touch of the gothic, of the renaissance, of the old English, and or, just a touch, however, a kind of blind man's buff of a house. A very odd man lived here, but for ten months in the year he and his family frequented about the social centers of the world. And with a house like this on his hands, one could surely blame him. Twelve a week down the street, always a caterer came in, flourished a feather duster and went away again. Society reporters always referred to this house as "the painted redoubt."

This morning a woman stood in the alcove window and looked down into the glistening street. The venetian red of her hair trapped the reflected sunlight from the opposite windows, and two little points of silver danced in her blue eyes. Ah, but her eyes were blue-blue as sapphire water in the morning, blue as the summer sky seen through a cleft in the mountains, blue as lapis lazuli, with the same flares of gold. And every feature and contour of the face harmonized with the marvelous hair and the wonderful eyes; a beautiful face, warm, dreamy, engaging, mobile. It was not the face of a worldly woman; neither was it the face of a girl. It was too emotional for the second, and there was not enough control for the first.

But the prophecy of laughter did not come to pass. The little wrinkles faded, the mouth grew sad, and the silver points no longer danced in her eyes. The pain in her heart was always shadowing. She had seen her fairest dream beaten and crumpled upon the reef of disillusion.

Yet again the smile renewed itself. She was a creature of varying moods. She twisted and untwisted the newspaper. Should she? Ought she? Had she not always regretted these singular impulses? And yet what harm to read this letter and return it to the sender? She was so lonely here. It was like being among a strange people, so long ago was it that her foot had touched this soil. Was it possible that she was twenty-five? Was there not some miscount, and was it not fifteen instead? Would not this fit of wisdom and folly be decided ere long?

She opened the paper and the clubbed—not every woman would have thought of that. Then a new inspiration came to her. She sent Bettina for the card basket. She scattered the contents upon the floor and sat down. Thinking of the day. He was known, then, to the master and mistress. Very good. She now gave her full attention to the letter, which she had not yet perused.

To the Lady in the Fog:

To begin with, let me say that I, too, have laughed. But there was some degree of chagrin in my laughter. On my word of honor, it was a distinct shock to my sense of dignity when I saw that idiotic personal of mine in the paper. It is my first offense of the kind, and I am really ashamed. But the situation was not ordinary. Ordinary women do not sing in the streets after midnight. As you could not possibly be ordinary, my offense has greater magnitude. To indicate a personal to a gentleman! A thousand pardons! I doubted that it would come under your notice, and even if it did, I was sure that you would ignore it. To find a woman with an appreciable sense of humor in your letter was a surprise. With initiation I was right. How you found out my name confounds me.

"Indeed," murmured the lady.

Doubtless you have the club list in your house. Do you know, when the letter was written, I was sitting under the street lamp, and I was sure that I was not alone. There were not a dozen of them at the club. I tell you truthfully that my own name had just been written in your letter.

I was so lonely, my thoughts were far away, I was so full of love, more Italian blood in my veins than there is in yours.

"What made him think that, I wonder?"

I therefore write this to a language familiar to us all. I am sure that you will not speak and understand it thoroughly. Brevity or simplicity, while ever it may be, have no mutual friends. Are you not known to some one who seems to me some one who will speak for me, my character, my personality?

"It is rather a dull letter so far," said the lady.

You say you sang because at that moment you were not alone. Surely with a voice like yours one cannot possibly be

OF MIDDLE AGE

Need Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Brookfield, Mo.—"Two years ago I was unable to do any kind of work and only weighed 116 pounds. My trouble dates back to the time that women are expected to bring on the Change of Life. I got a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it made me feel much better, and I have continued its use. I am very grateful to you for the good health I now enjoy."—Mrs. SARAH LOUGHRAN, 414 S. Livingston Street, Brookfield, Mo.

The Change of Life is the most critical period of a woman's existence, and neglect of health at this time invites disease and pain.

Women everywhere should remember that there is no other remedy known to medicine that will so successfully carry women through this trying period as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs.

For 30 years it has been curing women from the worst forms of female illness—inflammation, ulceration, displacements, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, and nervous prostration.

If you would like special advice about your case write a confidential letter to Mrs. Pinkham at LYNN, MASS. Her advice is free and always helpful.

out the folds. "Mine Angot—There is a letter for you in the mail department of this office." It was so dull it was unlike anything she had ever heard of—a personal inquiry column, where Cupids and Cupids killed and cooed. The nearest chance had thrown the original inquiry under her notice. Her answer was an impulse to which she had given no second thought till too late. She ought to have ignored it. But she was lonely; the people she knew were out of town, and the first night since her

This man was in all probability a gentleman, since he was a member of a gentleman's club. But second thought convinced her that this proved nothing. Men are often called gentlemen out of compliment to their ancestors. Still, if this man only saw the affair from her angle of vision, the grotesque humor of it did not escape her common vulgar insight. She hesitated, as well she might. Supposing that eventually he found out who she was? That would never, never do. No one must know that she was in America, about to step into the wildest of wild adventures. No; she must not be found out. The king, who had been kind to her, and the court mung never knew. From their viewpoint they would have declared that she was about to inaugurate a distinguished name, to outrage the oldest aristocracy in Europe, the court of Italy. But she had her own opinion; what she proposed to do was in itself harmless and innocent. But this gentleman who leaned out of the window? She had seen the match flare in the young man's face. Was it the face she had seen in that flash of light that interested her sufficiently to risk the note? Against the dark of the night it had appeared for an instant, clear, crisp, ready as a cannon. The face warranted confidence.

She had long known that she had been large, happy with that transient happiness which at times was her portion. Could she ever judge another man by her looks? No! Against the dark of the night it had appeared for an instant, clear, crisp, ready as a cannon. The face warranted confidence.

She stepped down from the alcove, wound the gray veil round the ribbon and tossed them into a corner. Somehow in the daylight the mug was gone from his face, for she had recognized him that first day in the park. He rode well. She touched a bell. A maid appeared.

"Bettina, you will go to the office of his newspaper and inquire for a letter addressed to Mine Angot. And be quick, for I may change my mind."

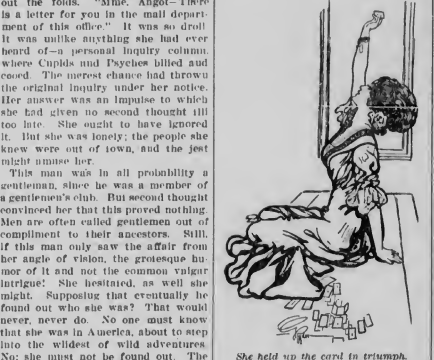

The maid was back in a half hour.

"There was a letter, then?" The points were dancing again in the blue eyes.

"You may go. Perhaps," and Bettina's mistress smiled—"perhaps I may let you read it and answer it after I am done with it. That would be rather neat."

The slight nod was a dismissal, and the maid went about her duties, which were not many in this house.

Merrifield the lady with the venetian hair toyed with the letter. Chubby paper! Evidently he was not afraid to trust her. But would he be amused her? The contents gave her a genuine surprise. She ran to the window, Italian! It was written in Italian, with all the flourish of an Italian hand. She turned to the signature—Hillard. So he had signed his name in full? She ruminated. How came such a name to belong to a man who wrote Italian so beautifully? She looked at the signature again. John-Giovanni. She would call him Giovanni. She had been rather clever. To have had the wit to look in the library for the blue book and the club-unhappy, if only I might meet you not at all. But that is not the case. There is just a little very healthy romance waiting to be given life. Your voice haunts me. But of every letter it comes to me—"She is so innocent, so youthful!"

She held up the card in triumph.

JOHN HILLARD.

The letter fluttered into her lap. She leaned on her elbows. It was not a bad letter, and she rather liked the boyish tone of it. Nothing vulgar peeped out from between the lines. Did he really love music? He must. For it was not every young man who could pick the melody of a forgotten opera. Rather than tempt fate she decided not to answer this letter. It would be neither wise nor Romance! The word came back to her. With an unmusical laugh she stood up, shaking the letter to the floor. Romance? She was no longer a girl. She was a woman of five and twenty, and what should a woman know of romance? Ah, there had been a time when all the world was romance—romance; when the night breeze had whispered it under her casement window, when the lattice climbing roses had breathed it when the moon and the stars had spelled it. Romance? She hated the word not less than she hated the Italian language, the Italian people, the country itself. She spurned the letter with her foot and fed the newspaper to the fire.

She went downstairs to the piano and played with strong feeling. Presently she began to sing a haunting, melancholy song by Alti. She was mistress of every tone, every shade, every expression.

The door opened gradually. Crash! The music was over.

"Bettina? Bettina, are you listening?"

"I am always listening." Bettina squeezed into the room. "It is beautiful to sing like that! There will be kings and dukes at your feet!"

"Enough!"

"Pardon, signora, I forgot. But listen, I bring a message. A boy came to say that the rehearsal will be at 4 this afternoon. It is now after 12."

"So late? We must be off."

"And the letter upstairs on the door?"

"Some day, Bettina, you will enter the forbidden chamber, and I shall have to play Bluebird. The time, however, I do not mind. Leave it there or burn it," indifferently.

Bettina knew her mistress. She thought best to leave the letter where it lay, forgotten for the time being.

History of The Lucile Memorial

By Miss Laura Satterfield

We have learned from family and church history that sometime in 1830 a few men and women living in Cloverport, surrounded by all the comforts and pleasures that were required at that time to make people contented and happy, realized that the one thing needed was lacking, a house in which to assemble themselves and little ones on the holy Sabbath to worship the true and living God.

They were few in number, but it was their privilege to hold a weekly prayer meeting in an old log school house. Being rooted and grounded in Presbyterian faith, they determined to get a minister and organize a church. As in our lives so in theirs, the tangled threads of experience that crossed and recrossed each other in their lives were not woven by chance, they were not without plan and direction.

CHARTER MEMBERS.

God, who notes even the smallest events of life in his own good time, sent a visiting minister who organized the Presbyterian church in 1841, with the following charter members: Mr. and Mrs. Marcus Allen, Mrs. D. R. Murray, Mr. Chapin, Mrs. Morton and Mrs. Tucker, who died one year after the 13th of this month. The first minister to come as licentiates or stated supply were the Rev. Yenabie, who remained only a short time, and was followed by Rev. Bayless. The facts of his ministry are not known, only that he died during his vacation home. In the year 1846, the Rev. William M. Simon, a young man just from a school of learning, gifted, in speech with a clear and keen perception of duty and full of the love of God, had been sent apart by the laying on of the hands of the Presbytery with the command, "Go ye forth and preach the Gospel", was the first installed pastor to this church. The removal of this young man by death, Sept. 21, 1848, at the age of 27 years, 5 months and 21 days, brought to the field the Rev. William McAffee, of Ireland, who also taught school and is remembered as teacher by one of more of the citizens at the present time, but only a short time was allotted to him here. He too was stricken by the hand of death August 7, 1853, 32 years of age, and side by side in the Murray grave-yard, with marble stones to mark their last resting place, lie the mortal remains of the first installed ministers of this church.

STORE ROOM FIRST CHURCH.

A store room owned by Col. D. R. Murray had been fitted up and furnished as a house of worship, and afterwards given as a church. And oft in meditation as our minds revert to some of the scenes that transpired in that little old church, sometime scenes of gladness and joy, again sorrow and tears, which are often bleaded in an ecstasy we do not understand. We wonder if in this building with all its modern improvements will be found the lasting joy and solid comfort found within those walls, even thoughts of which bring to the minds of most of the members of the present congregation, cherished memories never to be forgotten.

Owing to the destruction of the church records by fire we must omit the names and many interesting reminiscences during the pastorate of the ministers to the old church.

TWO SERVANTS CALLED.

We mention the Rev. R. W. Clelland and Dr. Frank Grossman, for it was during their ministry and due to their influence that Miss Mary E. Parry went as a missionary to China in 1887. We cannot recall the exact date, but know that sometime near this period one of Cloverport's noblest young men was called to the ministry, neither can we tell where he completed his Theological education, but know that the Rev. Sammie Bates, who still calls Cloverport his home, is preaching to a large congregation in an up-to-date church in Marion, Ohio.

STARTED PLANS IN 1889

In 1889 the Rev. C. G. Overstreet, pastor at that time, called a congregational meeting to consider whether or not to repair the old church. After some discussion it was deemed undesirable to put any more money on the old building. After the call of J. F. Horton, the condition of the church at that time was such that it was absolutely necessary to formulate plans whereby a new house of worship might be erected. In the year 1893 the foundation was laid. Owing to the lack of finances the work was suspended from time to time and resumed again in 1901, when the 1st Presbyterian church was completed with an indebtedness of $350. We could then stand and look with pride upon a handsome brick edifice, an ornament to any city. It was the pride of the members, the interior being a model of architectural beauty at a cost of $7500. We pass rapidly over the date, Wednesday night, March 13, 1901, when for hours half the little city of Cloverport was enveloped in flames. Thursday morning we found both the old and new churches a mass of debris and ashes. Not many in Cloverport but remember the efficient service of the Rev. Donald M. Grant, who worked so zealously for the completion of this church. At the time of this destructive fire the Rev. J. E. Blair, of Oregon, was here as pastor. The following Sunday afternoon he called the members together at the Baptist church and by a unanimous vote it was decided to rebuild the church. We had only $1000 insurance and owed $350.

RISE UP FROM ASHES.

Work was begun with very little resource in view. We shall ever be grateful to the churches of the Louisville Presbytery for responding so readily to our call for help and to the ladies of the Presbyterian Societies from whom we received unasked for a check for money a few days after the fire. Work was begun with the delays that usually attend such an undertaking.

CHURCH NAMED.

In the year 1899 during the visit of Dr. and Mrs. Donald McDonald, the church received the name of Lucile Memorial in memory of Mrs. McDonald's deceased daughter. After the resignation of Mr. Blair the Rev. T. L. Walton took charge of the church and remained until called to a larger field. He was followed by Rev. T. C. Kerr, who remained until 1906. During his ministry Wilbur Hamman brought his letter from Nashville to this church, this being his home. Mr. Hamman is now at Marysville, Tenn., preparing for the ministry. It is enough to say we bespeak for Mr. Hamman all that is claimed for a Presbyterian minister.

AN IDEAL MINISTER.

Our present pastor, Rev. E. W. Graves, being a man of strong personal piety, he soon won our confidence. He presents the gospel in a forcible manner with tenderness and love. He is much beloved by the members and is held in high regard by the people.

The building of the Lucile Memorial meant struggle, self denial and loyalty

With the heavy debt and oft removal of ministers, we met discouragement on every hand, but with courage undaunted, we never wavered nor was our- unmingled with pleasure and often what we thought were stumbling blocks proved to be stepping stones to success. While this church will not compare with our first Presbyterian church it is an ornament to the community and a monument to the fidelity and persistent efforts of the leaders, who so faithfully paved the way.

FRIENDS APPRECIATED.

We appreciate and shall ever hold in grateful remembrance the friends who were ever ready to respond to our call for aid. Our church has been completed without one cent of indebtedness. We have met all the financial obligations. Among the members a beautiful harmony prevails. With this month closes our work for the ecclesiastical year. But, 'Tis not by might, nor by power, but by my spirit saith the Lord,' 'Aside from me ye can do nothing.' To Him be all the praise.

McGavock's School District.

Misses Beatrice and Helen Ballman, who are attending school here, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Pete Ballman at Tar Springs.

The farmers are busy sowing oats. Jack Jones, the trustee of this district, was a visitor of the school. Monday and was well pleased with the work being done by the pupils and teacher.

Albert Newman went to Cloverport Wednesday.

J. M. Beatty had his foot hurt while cutting oats for a plant bed, but is better now.

A Kind Idea.

What was a lovely surprise to Miss Georgia White, whose home burned last Monday, was the miscellaneous shower given her by the Ladies Reading Club and other friends at the home of Mrs. Frank Fraize Thursday afternoon.

The house was decorated in cut flowers and Miss Warfield, who assisted in entertaining, made the occasion a most happy one for Miss White. Delicious lunch and cakes were served. These and the souvenirs were in the Irish color in accordance with St. Patrick's day.

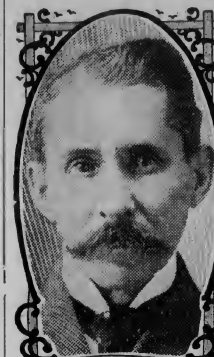

When Miss White saw the dining room table laden with gifts, wrapped in white tissue paper and green ribbons, she could not have been more surprised had the ashes of her home turned to pearls. Miss White received everything from a paper of pins to a pair of blankets, including a five dollar gold piece.

CATARRH DESTROYED MY APPETITE.

PERUNA rarely fails to restore the appetite. Immediately upon beginning the use of Peruna patients begin to eat and digest. This is the universal testimony, coming from all parts of the civilized world.

Catarrh is a very frequent cause of loss of appetite and disturbed digestion. The beneficial influence of Peruna on catarrh completely restores the appetite in such cases.

To prod the digestive organs with medicines that are merely stimulants is a poor way to remedy such cases.

"I am now cured and cheerful in spirits, all through the agency of Peruna, which has cured me effectually and restored my appetite."
"My only regret is that I did not use Peruna sooner and I would have avoided all my previous suffering and misery."
—Mr. Joseph H. Conlan.

Removed Catarrh, Restored Appetite.

Mr. Joseph H. Conlan, 467 7th Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y., writes: "I suffered from catarrh, which completely destroyed my appetite and weakened my entire system."

Torpid Liver, Stomach Trouble.

Mr. James O'Hara, 625 Madison St., Topeka, Kas., conductor Santa Fe Railway and member Order of Railway Conductors, writes:

"I suffered with a torpid liver and stomach trouble, which made my complexion very sallow, and I felt miserable and tired all the time."

"An aunt wrote me that she was taking Peruna with such good results that she advised me to try it, and I finally bought a bottle, although I disliked to take patent medicines."
"However, I found Peruna very agreeable to take, and effective, as I felt better in a week. I took only five bottles in all and I found that was all I needed."

"I am most grateful to you for what your medicine has done for me."
Dysentery Entirely Relieved.
Mr. W. N. Casey, Leamington, Ill., writes:

"In two weeks after beginning your treatment I was well. I used nine bottles of Peruna. My case was bow trouble or dysentery."
"I also tried Peruna for a cough, a cording indigestion, and it exceeds as cough syrup I ever need."
"I wish every one afflicted would give Peruna a trial."

Per-na as a Tonic.

Capt. R. B. Smith, Greensboro, Gr writes: "After using several bottles of Peruna I can recommend it as one of the best catarrh medicines on the market. As tonic it has no equal."

Catarrh of Stomach.

Mr. Henry Neely, First Lieutenant Co. "F," 8th Regiment, U. S. A., B. 623, Trenton, Mo., writes: "I suffer for years with catarrh of the stomach. Seeing an advertisement of Peruna, I bought a bottle and every dose made me feel better. Seven bottles completely cured me."

GARFIELD.

We have a new doctor in town. Dr. Sanbach, of McQuady, has located here. We welcome him and his family to our little burg.

If the best is not too good for you, Lewisport Best flour is the flour you ought to use.

Mr. and Mrs. I. B. Richardson and children and Miss Ruth Frymire were visitors at Mr. and Mrs. Minor Compton's Thursday night and Friday. They report a pleasant visit and a royal reception at the hospitable Compton home.

Prayer meeting was organized here Wednesday night. A good congregation was present. Bro. Minor Compton presiding.

Garfield handles more freight than any other town of its size in the country. We have five or six trains daily. Mrs. Nannie Solder, of Hardinsburg was the guest of Miss Mary Stid Thursday.
